These 3 words are the key to describe 2 year long project, in which the partnership will work together. Our aim is to create a social game to develop the necessary competences to work in the field of International Project Management.

In the recent years, the need for international project management skills is somewhat inevitable. If you are involved in international project management at any level, or you teach management skills as a trainer, you are a HR expert, or you are interested on how (social) games can be used in education, then this project is for you.

What have we done so far:

To have a clear view of the current situation, partners have carried out national researches to analyse the implementation of game based learning initiatives to develop professional competences. Each partner has interviewed 5 experts in game based learning and numerous professionals in the field of training and HR participated in an online survey.

At the same time, the partners have carried out research to identify which are the main competences an international project manager should have. During the research, the partnership directly contacted the target group of the project, and will keep close contact with them throughout the development process.

What is next:

Based on the results of our extended research, the development of the LPMnAge social game have started, by selecting those skills and competences, that can be trained by our application. Also the appropriate pedagogical approach is about to be selected. We are looking for the best combination of materials and methods in order to provide a user friendly enjoyable but also highly useful social game. In the next period of the project, the hard work of development will start, and then our product will be multiply tested in 2014. Follow our work...
